

SELF-REGULATION OR GOVERNMENT REGULATION: ACCREDITATION AT THE TIPPING POINT

JUDITH EATON
PRESIDENT, COUNCIL FOR HIGHER EDUCATION ACCREDITATION

Friday, February 29

11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Law School Auditorium

There will be a reception following this event.

Accreditation of higher education institutions and programs has come under significant scrutiny during the past two years, especially from the federal government. There has been a major effort to federalize accreditation, transforming the self-regulatory enterprise into a mechanism by which government regulation will define and judge academic quality. Will this effort to federalize accreditation be successful and, if so, what does this mean for the nation's colleges and universities?

Co-sponsored by the Higher Education Collaborative

The Forum for the Future of Public Education addresses critical issues that face public education today and in the future.
